As a licensed doctor of physical therapy, I strongly recommend that you continue to support the Texas Physical Therapy licensing board as they are a very well run agency who efficiently responds to our professional needs and license violations. I truly believe that a consolidation with other non-medical entities will likely diminish this efficiency, will cost more, and will reduce the standard of safe medical care in the state. Furthermore, the ability to raise the level of knowledge regarding the many intricacies of hands on physical therapy for literally hundreds of diagnosis with multiple treatment regimes, will be unsurmountable for a non medical entity to absorb. Thank you for your strong consideration of this obvious dilemma. Respectfully,
Larry Feeler
