Subject: Hard Work for my career

I'm here to speak on the matter because I've dedicated so many years in my career as an Radiologic Technologist to stand aside and allow a group of people denounce this highly trained profession. To disregard any trained professional in any career is really disrespectful. I feel that the one's that's trying to become trained in this field needs to do the require step that the 28,000 other technologists has done complete the required course. And as healthcare professional I won't allow anyone that's not properly train to do anything to my body let alone expose me to radiation. There's got to be a time when laws maker's stop trying to find shortcuts in healthcare. If that's the case will you allow my credentials to walk in an become a nurse I don't think so because there's still training to do.
