Your Comments About the Staff Report, Including Recommendations Supported or Opposed:

The Texas Midwifery Board is not scheduled for Sunset Review until 2016-2017.

Any changes to the make-up of the Midwifery Board or it's law or rules should wait until that set time.

The Texas Midwifery Board should not be moved to the Department of Licensing and Regulation. DSHS is best equipped to regulate health care professions.

The move will eliminate rule-making authority of the Midwifery Board, an ability crucial to continually improving safety and maintaining best practice standards.

Previously, the Sunset Review Commission has rejected the idea of moving the Texas Midwifery Board to the Medical Board or the Board of Nursing. These are not viable alternatives since Licensed Midwives are not doctors, nurses, or physician assistants. They are not medical professionals. However, I chose to deliver my child with a Licensed Midwife and received phenomenal care throughout my pregnancy and delivery. I love my midwife and my experience. I got the birth I always wanted, outside of a hospital, and would not have it any other way.

Any Alternative or New Recommendations on This Agency:

ACOG/TCOG have stated in their comments that there is a conflict of interest due to Licensed Midwives holding the majority on the Midwifery Board.

However, doctors hold the majority on the Medical Board and nurses hold the majority on the Board of Nursing.

During the last Sunset Review, it was the Sunset Review Commission that chose to give midwives a majority on the Board since other Boards at DSHS and around the country have practitioners from that profession as the majority on the Board.

ACOG/TCOG have stated in their comments that "lay midwives" should have to comply with ACME standards and take the AMCB exam for certification.

First, Licensed Midwives are not "lay midwives". The Texas Midwifery Board already requires standardized education for Licensed Midwives as well as the NARM exam, a 350-question, eight-hour comprehensive midwifery exam. NARM is accredited by the National Commission for Certifying Agencies (NCCA) which is the same accredits ACME.

I received exceptional care for the entire 9 months of my pregnancy by a Licensed Midwife. The midwives were nothing short of professional.

The requirements recommended by ACOG/TCOG are for nurse-midwives with an expanded scope beyond that of the Licensed Midwife and are not specialized for providing care in out-of-hospital settings. These standards would put over 200 midwives out of business, harming Texas' economy and omitting this choice for maternity care for thousands of Texans, like myself.

No changes are currently needed to the Texas Midwifery Board and revisions should be discussed during the 2016-2017 review.
